

THE FIRST TWENTY YEARS:
A LINEAR HISTORY OF RICHMOND CHAPTER, CSI

PREAMBLE

There is a dearth of records, minutes, and other information regarding the organization and founding of this Chapter. The Historian, accordingly, has had to rely on the memories of some of the Charter members and past officers in order to bring the facts (?) to light. Some of the older Secretary's Minute Books still survive but none dating from the very beginning. With that as a preamble, we will do the best that we can and beg forgiveness for any "errors and/or omissions" as being beyond recall.

HISTORY

A small group of interested architects, specification writers, material suppliers (formerly called specification readers) and one engineer, under the urging of James Francis, Judge Hazelgrove and F. Milton Garey, met to discuss the possibility of forming a chapter of the Institute, which itself had only been organized in 1947. Several organizational meetings were held with information and support from the Institute in Washington to assist. After determined canvassing of local architects and engineer's offices, and contacts with interested suppliers, a total of twelve active members and twenty-three associate members were enrolled and a Charter was applied for with the Institute. This Charter was issued and a Charter meeting was held in June 1959 for the formal presentation.

ORGANIZATION AND PROGRAMS

The Chapter honored one of its founders by electing James E. Francis as its first president. Jim's major activity this first year was an all-out push to enroll new members and predicated entirely upon the 1960-61 roster, this activity was a success with a total of nineteen active and thirty-one associate members listed. All necessary committees were formed and began formulating programs within the framework of the guide lines laid down by the Institute. The programs generally were on topics of widespread interest to the membership and a theme of "a working organization" was established at the very inception, working to fulfill one of the principal aims of the Institute, that of the betterment of construction specifications. Since most specification writing was not taught as a college course but had to be "learned in the doing", the programs were developed toward that end. The meetings were to be workshop affairs using the experience and background of specialists in their particular fields to appear, offer a short lecture presentation and then sit to have their brains picked by the attenders. Some were put on by individuals at first, but soon evolved into a panel of experts with a moderator.

TECHNICAL WORKSHOPS

The analysis of a single section of specification actually used on a project proved popular for a while and if you had nerve enough to submit one for a program, you could expect to have it broken down, torn to pieces, reconstructed and restructured, and you'd be left with the feeling that you didn't know a thing. However, everyone accepted this in the proper sense because it helped you to realize how little you really knew and how much you needed to know.

EDUCATION

Since most specification writers are mainly office-bound, the need to get out into the field to see how things were made, how they were put together and how the sub and general contractors used what you wrote, was quite evident. This led to the establishment of a spring field trip, usually in May, during which this phase of the spec writer's education came into being. We have watched fabrication and erection procedures of parts of the Hampton Coliseum, commercial and naval ship fabrication, making and burning of bricks from raw clay to finished product, production of concrete masonry units, production of pre-cast concrete items, production of operations in a ready-mix concrete plant, production of roofing slates and slate panels from quarry to application, production of light-weight concrete aggregates, production of specialty stone products, both natural and man-made, production of laboratory furniture, production of custom millwork and many more. These field trips were like a busman's holiday but the fellowship and camaraderie that went along with the basic education phases made it all the more enjoyable as well as fruitful.

PUBLICATIONS

From its inception, the Chapter has published a monthly newsletter, presently called The Richmond Report. This publication has won national recognition several years as best publication of its kind for Chapters with our membership. It is now self-supporting through paid advertising. Not only meeting notices, minutes and necessary information are published in the Report but also technical and informative articles. Several such articles by Chapter members have found further publication in the national magazine, The Specifier, which is as old as the Institute.

OUTREACH

The Chapter has been instrumental in organizing two other chapters in Virginia. The Tidewater Chapter, organized in 1964, was led into formation by several Richmond members, assisted just prior to Charter, by Edmund T. Pairo, Past National President and Charles Dorman, then Regional Director and subsequently National President of the Institute, both from the Washington Metropolitan Chapter. Just recently, several of our members have assisted in the organization and chartering of the Blue Ridge Chapter, based in Roanoke. We have always had members, not only able, but willing to "sell" the Institute and these two Chapters are the fruits of their efforts.

REGION ACTIVITIES

The Chapter has acted as host for the largest Tri-Regional Conference ever held. In 1968, this conference was held in Williamsburg, Virginia, with more than 360 persons attending, a success not only in numbers but also in quality of program. One more Tri-Regional Conference was co-hosted with the Metropolitan Washington Chapter in Annapolis, Maryland, with great success. Recently a Regional Conference was held in Williamsburg, Virginia, in conjunction with a seminar sponsored by the Chapter, both well attended and successful.

JOINT MEETINGS

The first meeting in the fall of each year is a joint meeting with the James River Chapter, AIA, Richmond Chapter, AGC, Richmond Chapter, VSPE and Richmond Chapter, CEC, with each organization taking turns acting as host for the meeting. These meetings are always well attended with programs of interest to the construction industry as a whole.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

From its inception, the Chapter's December meeting has taken the form of a social meeting attended by members, their wives and/or girl friends. There are several photo albums in the possession of Bob Neale and slides in the possession of Ken Barrie to testify to the fact that when fun is specified, we can complete the contract to the letter. Quite frequently, the field trips have terminated in some type of picnic outing, trips down the James, and shad plankings. For anyone who has not eaten a properly planked shad with hot buttered spoonbread, well, you've just not lived, that's all.

INSTITUTE PARTICIPATION

Several of our members have served well on National Institute Committees and our own John Stonnell served a term as Section

Director, Northeast Section. We have had voting delegates in attendance at all National Conventions since being Chartered, as well as all Tri-Regional and Regional Conferences. Several of our members have served as instructors in courses offered by our local community colleges in the field of specification writing, cost estimating, critical path method and fast tract construction. We have also furnished lecturers to state colleges in the field of specification writing.

CHANGES - INSTITUTE NOMENCLATURE'

There have been some changes in the Institute nomenclature during the past twenty years. The "Active" members changed to "Professional" members. The "Associate" members have changed to "Industry" members. The attempt to change the name of "The Construction Specifications Institute", however, was soundly defeated and properly so. This name was chosen by one of the founding fathers, Carl J. Ebert, as a calm but forceful name which has impressed everyone and is so indicative of the aims of the organization.
